DESIGN FOR LIVING

by Noël Coward

directed by JONATHAN GREENMAN

*"I love you. You love me. You love Otto. I love Otto.
Otto loves me. There now! start to unravel from there."*

Noël Coward's wickedly witty dark romantic comedy Design for Living portrays three unconventional, stylish characters and their hopelessly inescapable emotional entanglement: Gilda, the interior designer, Leo, the playwright, and Otto, the artist, are three people passionately in love with each other.

Set in 1930s Paris, London, and New York, this stylish and scandalous comedy follows their desperate attempt to try and find a conventional path forward – only to discover their own original Design for Living.

With his unmistakably biting comic style, Noël Coward explores themes of love, sexuality, celebrity, and success as well as the conflicts of human desire.
